Parks and Recreation writer Amram satirizes the idea that women are incapable of understanding science by dumbing it down, drenching it in sex and lightening the textual load with a lot of graphics. The author describes herself (often) as “a fun, flirty young woman” who remains obsessed with her ex-boyfriend and details how she has wreaked her revenge on him, sexual and otherwise.

Allow me to recommend Megan Amram's Science...For Her! The comedian's debut book, published November 4th, provides a smart spoof of popular women's interest magazines. Presented as a science textbook, Science...For Her! is simultaneously a silly romp through pseudoscience and a feminist rant against an increasingly tone deaf publishing industry.
